SCHOOL OF ADVANCED INTERNATIONAL STUDIES

The Johns Hopkins University

Duties of The Academic Board and The Advisory Council

The Academic Board of the School of Advanced International Studies is the advisory group of the School which gives critical and continuing attention to educational matters and, when necessary, submits recommendations to the President of the University for his approval or for final action by the Board of Trustees. These matters will include maintenance of University academic standards, changes in the academic program, appointments to the academic staff, academic promotions and questions of educational policy. The Board should meet at least twice each semester, and oftener on the call of the Chairman.

The Advisory Council to the School of Advanced International Studies (whose membership is the same as that of the Board of Trustees of the Foreign Service Educational Foundation) advises the Dean of the School and the President of the University on administrative matters, including fiscal, organizational, public relations, and related problems.

If either the Academic Board or the Advisory Council initiates discussions on matters which fall within the purview of the other, or which are of joint or mutual interest, the tentative recommendation pertaining thereto should be referred to the President of the University for appropriate consultation and final determination.
